

UDK 334.758.2/6

JEL Classification: G34, L4, F15

INDUSTRIAL INTEGRATION AS FACTOR OF THE SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT OF ECONOMY

L. M. Davidenko

Innovative University of Eurasia, Pavlodar, Kazakhstan

OMSK STATE UNIVERSITY n.a. F.M. Dostoevskiy, Omsk, Russian Federation

E-mail: davidenko@rambler.ru

Summary

Background:

Industrial integration is one of major factors of a sustainable development of economy in the conditions of change of environment. Topical issue is research of integration with participation of economic entities of fuel and energy complex. It is promoted by a condition of the market of oil production in the world, a difficult economic situation round the Russian and Kazakhstan enterprises of a petrochemical complex.

Materials and methods:

Research is based on use of open sources of the official sites. Digital information is based on statistics of oil production and oil processing. Methods of the analysis and synthesis at identification and classification of tendencies of development of processes of industrial integration are applied.

Results:

The essence of industrial integration as factor of a sustainable development of economy is opened. Tendencies of development of integration processes with participation of the industrial companies are revealed.

Conclusions:

It is offered to use mechanisms of production integration at a basis of innovations and modernization in practice.

Keywords: industrial integration, economic relations, sustainable development, modernization, innovations.