Abstract. The article is devoted to the period of service of Archimandrite Leonid (Kavelin; 1822-1891) as abbot of the Resurrection Stavropegic Monastery, called New Jerusalem (1869-1877). The main types of activities of the famous church historian, writer and archaeographer are considered: liturgical, administrative, economic, scientific, spiritual and educational. To characterize the personality and deeds of Fr. Leonid, his writings, epistolary heritage, documents of the monastery archive are used. The results of the rector's work in New Jerusalem are analyzed: the formation of the senior brethren, restoration work, the construction of the church of the Holy Martyr Tatiana; the creation of the Patriarch Nikon Museum and photo workshop; the compilation of an inventory of temples, sacristy, library and museum (1875).
